Tax Credits Guidance

Please note: Tax Credits are currently being replaced by a new benefit called Universal Credit. As a result, there will be no new claims for Tax Credits (unless you get the severe disability premium or got it in the past month and are still eligible for it). Current claimants can continue to receive Tax Credits until they are notified by the Government that they are being moved, or there is a significant change of circumstance that results in them being moved onto Universal Credit.

We strongly advise in any change of circumstances that you seek advice from an independent Adviser before making a claim for Universal Credit as this may not be the most financially beneficial option. Call our Family Benefits Advice Service on 0800 028 3008 for personalised advice.

More information is available in the Universal Credit Factsheet available on the downloads section of our website.

What are Tax Credits?

Tax Credits are payments from the Government that provide money to people responsible for children and/or workers on lower incomes. They can also help pay towards registered childcare costs. There are two types of Tax Credit:

1. Child Tax Credit - which supports families with children
2. Working Tax Credit - for working people on a low income.

The amount of Tax Credit you receive depends on your individual circumstances, including:

- your age
- your household income
- how many children live with you
- if you work and how many hours you work
- if you pay for registered childcare
- if you or anyone in your household has a disability.

Tax Credits are normally based on your current personal circumstances, however they are usually calculated using your income from the previous tax year. For the tax year 6 April 2022 to 5 April 2023 this is your taxable income for the financial year ending 5 April 2022. You will find this information on your latest P60. If your income has risen or will rise by more than £2,500 between the two tax years then you must inform Tax Credits and they will recalculate your award based on your current year income.

To qualify for Tax Credits you must be aged 16 or over and usually live in the UK. Some people may be eligible if they don’t live in the UK, for example, you live in another country in the European Economic Area but work in the UK. You may be able to use the Childcare Element of Working Tax Credits to pay a registered childcare provider based in a European Economic Area (EEA) country (this change was introduced on 21 March 2019). For full eligibility criteria see the Government’s guidance: www.gov.uk/browse/benefits/tax-credits

CHILD TAX CREDIT

Can you get Child Tax Credit?

Child Tax Credit is a payment to support families with children. You can get Child Tax Credit if your income is low enough to qualify, or if you are not working, and you are responsible for at least one child who is:

- under 16
- under 20 and in full-time education or approved training.

You can continue to receive Child Tax Credit up to the 31 August after their 16th birthday, or up to their 20th birthday if they are in full-time education or approved training.

How much could you be entitled to?

The amount of Child Tax Credit you get depends on a range of factors including:

- your income
- any other benefits that you are in receipt of
- whether your child has a disability
- how many children are living with you.

Child Tax Credit contains several elements. The maximum value of each element is listed in the table below, however the actual amount you get depends on a range of factors and may be considerably less than the maximum. For example, if the household has income of over £6,770 per annum the taper rate (reduction rate) is 41% of remaining income so, for most households, the figures in the table will be significantly reduced. If the household doesn’t meet the Working Tax Credit rules the amount that can be earned is £17,005 before the 41% reduction takes place.

From 6 April 2017, most people will only get the child element of Child Tax Credit for up to two children. There will be some exceptions where parents face particular circumstances, such as multiple births. You’ll still be able to claim the disabled child premium for any of your children who are eligible to get it. You’ll still be able to claim it for more than two children if they were born before 6 April 2017.

Your child lives with more than one person

Only one household can claim Child Tax Credit for a child. Therefore, if there are shared living arrangements, you will have to decide who claims Child Tax Credit for that child. You can’t claim Child Tax Credit if your child doesn’t live with you at all, even if you are paying maintenance.

Adoptive parents and foster parents

If your Health and Social Care Trust (HSCT) or local authority has placed a child with you for adoption or fostering, you can claim Child Tax Credit for them as long as you are not getting any form of payment from that HSCT or local authority. If you are receiving payment, you should contact the Tax Credit Helpline on 0345 300 3900 to find out if you can make a claim.

WORKING TAX CREDIT

If you are working, you may be eligible to get Working Tax Credits if you are on a low income. It doesn’t matter whether you are working for someone else or are self-employed. Working Tax Credit is predominately based on your earnings and how many hours you work each week. The income thresholds stated in the previous section may be significantly higher if you have registered childcare costs or if you are a worker with a disability.

You do not have to have any children to qualify, however the rules are different for those who do have children and those who don’t.
Do you qualify?

The number of hours that you must work per week to be eligible for Working Tax Credit depends on your individual circumstances.

If you’re single, or in a couple, and have no children, you qualify if:
- You are aged 25 or over and work at least 30 hours per week.
- You have a disability, are aged 16 or over, and work at least 16 hours per week.
- You are aged 60 or over and work at least 16 hours per week.

If you are single, and have at least one child, you qualify if:
- You are aged 16 or over and you work at least 16 hours per week.

If you’re in a couple, and you are responsible for a child or young person, you qualify if:
- You are both aged 16 or over, either you or your partner work at least 16 hours per week, and the two of you work at least 24 hours per week between you in total.
- You are both aged 16 or over, one of you works at least 16 hours per week, is disabled and is in receipt of a qualifying benefit.
- You are both aged 16 or over, one of you works at least 16 hours per week, and the other partner is a hospital in-patient or entitled to Carer’s Allowance or in prison or gets certain disability benefits.
- One of you is aged 60 or over and working at least 16 hours per week.

How much are you entitled to?

Working Tax Credit contains several elements. The maximum value of each element is listed in the table below. The actual amount you get depends on a range of factors, including your income, how many hours you work, and your personal circumstances, and may be considerably less than the maximum.

Maternity, Paternity, Shared Parental or Adoption Leave

If you are on Maternity, Paternity or Adoption Leave, you may be able to claim Working Tax Credit as long as, immediately before you went on leave, you and your partner, if you have one, were working 16 hours or more and any of the following apply:

- You get Maternity Allowance.
- You are on Ordinary Maternity or Adoption Leave.
- You are in the first 13 weeks of Additional Maternity or Adoption leave.
- You are on Paternity Leave.
- You are on Shared Parental Leave.

During these times, you are still treated as being in work and are able to claim Working Tax Credit. The amount that you receive will depend on a range of factors as previously stated.

Off sick

If you’re off sick from work, you can claim Working Tax Credit if all of the following apply:

- You are off sick for 28 weeks or less.
- You are in receipt of specific benefits, for example, Employment and Support Allowance, Statutory Sick Pay or National Insurance Credits because you have a limited capability for work.
- You, and your partner if applicable, were working at least 16 hours per week immediately before you started getting any of these benefits.

Any further sick leave does not count as being in work therefore, if you do not return to work after 28 weeks you may no longer qualify.

Up to how much can you earn to be eligible for Tax Credits?

When you have a child and apply for Tax Credits, the Tax Credit Office will take into account your income and circumstances including the birth date of your child (and those of your partner, if applicable) when deciding how much you’re entitled to. Depending on these factors you may be eligible for a combination of both Working and Child Tax Credits. The figures below give you a rough idea of the upper annual household income limits for getting Tax Credits, depending on the number of children you have:

- One child: £26,000
- Two children: £33,000.
It is important to note that these figures are a guide only. Depending on your circumstances, such as having a child with a disability, or paying for registered childcare you may still qualify if your household income is higher.

HELP WITH CHILDCARE

If you work and pay for registered childcare, you may be entitled to the childcare element of Working Tax Credit. You can claim for this assistance as soon as you start using registered childcare.

You can only claim for the amount that is actually paid by you. How much you receive will depend on your circumstances.

What types of childcare qualify?

Only registered or approved childcare will qualify. This can include:
- day nurseries
- childminders
- approved home childcarers
- out of school clubs
- summer schemes.

Since March 2019, you may be able to use the Childcare Element of Working Tax Credits to pay a registered childcare provider based in a European Economic Area (EEA) country.

How much help can you get through Tax Credits for childcare costs?

You can get up to 70% of your childcare costs paid. There is a limit on the maximum eligible weekly childcare you can claim for, this is £175 for one child or £300 for two or more children. Therefore, you can get help of up to £210 per week towards your childcare costs.

Who can qualify?

If you are a single parent, you must work:
- 16 hours or more per week to claim help with childcare costs.

If you are part of a couple then generally both of you must work at least 16 hours per week to be eligible. However, only one of you must work 16 hours per week if the other is:
- ill or disabled and getting certain benefits, or in hospital
• in prison
• entitled to Carer’s Allowance - even if they don’t get any payments because they receive other benefits instead.

GENERAL INFORMATION

How Tax Credits are paid
You will receive any entitlement to Child and/or Working Tax Credit in the same payment. This will be paid directly into your bank, building society, or credit union account. You will be able to decide on either weekly or four weekly payments.

How to claim
Since the introduction of Universal Credit there are only limited circumstances in which a new claim for Tax Credits can be made. In order to check if you meet this criteria you will need to contact the Tax Credit Helpline on 0345 300 3900 or go online: www.gov.uk/claim-tax-credits If eligible, they will send you out the claim form, it normally takes a number of weeks for this form to be posted out to you.

You should return your claim form as soon as possible. This is because Tax Credits can usually only be backdated for up to one month from the date the Tax Credits Office receives your completed form.

If you are married, in a civil partnership or living together as part of a couple, you will need to make a joint claim. You can only make a single claim if you do not have a partner who lives with you.

Changes in circumstances
It is important to keep the Tax Credit Office up to date with any changes that may affect your award.

If you do not report changes then you may be paid too much Tax Credits. If this happens, you will then have to pay any money back that you should not have received. You may also be charged a penalty.

Common changes that need to be reported include:
• change in personal information
• change in childcare costs of more than £10 per week
• child stops going to childcare for 4 weeks or more when they would normally go
• births
• change in working hours
• increases in income of over £2,500
• decreases in income of over £2,500.

Income changes will only result in a change to your Tax Credit award if your income decreases by more than £2,500 or increases by more than £2,500.

Renewing a claim

Each year the Tax Credit Office will write to you asking you to check the information they have about you, confirm your income and renew your claim.

They need this in order to confirm that the payments made to you were correct, and to establish what amounts should be paid to you in the year ahead.

If you do not renew your Tax Credit award by the 31st July each year, your payments will stop, and you will be required to pay back all the Tax Credits you received within the current tax year. In addition, if you are found to have had an overpayment in the previous year you may have to pay back some or all of the Tax Credits you received.
